

Summer Reading Classes

This summer C.A.E.P. offered students reading classes with Ms. Maglio. They gave us the option to bring a book or choose one of the variety of books the teacher offered us. I decided I would read one of her books that caught my attention. "Everyday Heroes" is about men and women who have faced obstacles that include poverty, racism, abuse, neglect, illness, drugs and violence. These obstacles nearly destroyed their dreams. However, they have found the strength though it rained, we still managed to have a good time. In addition, towards the end of the day, we attended the Boyz to Men concert at 6:30 pm. It was wonderful. I would recommend it for us again!

*Reporting,
Demetri Underwood*

Computer Classes

This summer I was placed in charge of instructing our new employees on methods of computer maintenance. As a technician, this summer has been very educative on the most effective pedantic techniques. Technicians often need to explain complex concepts to technologically illiterate customers. Teaching this course has helped me clarify my ideas and invent procedures that may be of great use if I was ever needed for computer maintenance. Yet, these pedantic tricks did not benefit only me. I feel that the students too were greatly helped by a more hands-on, demonstrative course. They will definitely turn into expert computer technicians.

Reporting, Latiff